Prospect That a Mississippi Sandbar May Cause Litigation.

Memphs, Tenn., August 31.—Mr. M. Nealis, a real estate dealer of this city, who claims to be the owner in fee simple of the sandbar in the Mississippi at this point, was asked today what he would do when the United States government appropriates part of his property when it cuts the channel from Wolf river down along the Tennessee shore to the elevators, as mentioned in these dispatches a few days ago. He replied that he would resent any interference with his property by the United States, or any interference coming from any other sources.

proparty by the United States, or any interference coming from any other sources. He claims his title is legal and that his acquisition is valuable, as he now has a growing crop of corn on part of it. It is a well known principle of law that formations, such as this, belong to those who have land adjoining, but there is another novel question in the case.

A great part of the sandbar is where formerly the building blocks on the Titus estate stood. They were washed away, and this formation in their place, says a lawyer, if it belongs to anyone, is surely the property of these heirs. The Mississippi river, by leaving the deposits of sand there left with it a probable number of endless lawsuits, and the only way for an endless amount of Itigation to be avoided is for it to take the bar away by bringing a current to play on it.

its Phenomenal Growth in the South in Ten Years.

Ten Years.

Washington, August 21.—The superintendent of census has just issued his bulletin on the production of pig-iron in the United States during the year ended June 20, 1899. In this bulletin the superintendent says: "The production of pig-iron, including Bessemer, during the year named aggregated 9,579,779 tons (of 2,000 pounds to the ton), as compared with 3,781 021 tons produced during the census year of 1870.

"It will be gratifying to notice the great strides which the southern states have made in the manufacture of pig-iron since 1890, the total production in that year being 359,436 tons, as against 1,780,969 tons in 1890. The development of the manufacture of pig-iron in the United States during the ten years from 1889 to 1890 has been phenomenal, and at the present rate of increase in production this country is destined soon to become the leading producer of pig-iron in the world, possibly reaching this distinction in the calendar year 1800."

In point of production, Pennsylvania stands first, Ohio second, Alabama third, Illimois fourth, New York lifth, Virginia sixth and Tennessee seventh. The superintendent calls particular attention to the rapid development of the blast furnace industry of the southern states as one of the manufacture of pig iron in this countries in the growth of the manufacture of pig iron in this countries and the growth of the manufacture of pig iron in this countries the growth of the manufacture of pig iron in this countries in the growth of

The typewriter is now such a universally employed machine that it is not surprising that it should have suggested other instru-ments of a similar character. One of these is a shorthand typewriter, which has been invented by Mr. G. K. Anderson, of Boston, and by means of which an expert operator can easily take down the words of a public speaker as rapidly as they are uttered. After five or six weeks' practice an intelligent person can gain a speed of 100 words per minute, at least so says the inventor. And this would not seem to be an extravagant estimate when we are rold that about 230 words can be printed by this instrument with the same number of strokes which will print only fifty words on the ordinary typewriter. The instrument is much simpler than its prototype, for it deals only with the principal letters of the alphabet, others being represented by com-pounds of them. The signs are impressed upon a moving tape, as in so many printing telegraphic machines now in use.-New

Down in Hancock county there is a town known as Tioga, where the youths are great lovers of the national game. The grounds are laid out in an open space ad-joining the only church in the village, the rear of the church forming the back stop. Such is the general enthusiasm for the game that the boys play on Sunday morn-ing, even while the local paster is laboring to "hold up his end" inside the church. The other Sunday be had bold his congregation pretty well until his mineteenthly, where he reached the climax. "Then, hew, my dear brethren, oh, how are we to gain the kingdom of heaven?" Origin of Yale and Harvard.

To speak in a general way, petther Elibu Yale ner John Harvard gave enough money to the founding of a college to support a modern young gentleman through his college course. Many a senior has spent in a year more money than the $500 or the portion of half the £1,500 which Mr. Yale and Mr. Harvard respectively devised to the institutions which bear their names. With the three little words, "why," "how," "what," it is quite possible for some blockhead to puzzle a philosopher. "Why does the magnetic needle point al-ways to the north!" "How was the uni-verse made!" "What is light!" Here are three questions that any fool may ask, yet that all the wisdom in the world cannot answer. There are hundreds of other queries as simple and as likely to suggest themselves to the inquisitive to which science can make ne satisfactory reply. On the other hand, positive philosophy, his-tory, the mechanic arts and other practical branches of human knowledge afford con-clusive responses to a vast number of im-portant "wkys" and "hows" and "whats." All that it is necessary for man to know he can learn from these sources, and educa-tion in its best sense consists in the broadcast diffusion of the information they afford, in its simplest, clearest form. Europeans say that we are an over curious people—that we examine and cross-examine strangers about matters with which we have no concern. That's a mistake, Everything in the way of information that any human being is willing to impart concerns us. We want to know. If those we ques-tion do not choose to answer, or cannot answer, our "whys" and "hows" and "whats," they can say so. We shall not be offended by the rebuil; but ask, we will.-New York Ledger.

A Witty Cabman.

Among the cabmen at the city hall plaza is one who has a reputation for wit among his fellow cubbins. His name, I think, is Cornell. He had as a sustomer the other night a certain literary gentleman who is distinguished by the cieganos of his rai-ment as well as the costliness of the umbrellas he carries. Of this literary swell one of his intimates mays "he spends threeand the other fourth in buying umbrellas."
One wet night he sported a particularly loud umbrella, and probably learing that the heavy shower might injure it he hired a cab to take him home. Arriving there the cabman demanded $1 from him.

"What do you mean by overcharging me," said the literary swell as he hoisted the umbrella. "Do you know who I am?"
"I don't care if you were the umbrells, I'll have my fare," said the coachman, and he got it.-Brooklyn Eagle.

Still another textile material bids fair to rival juse. This time it is the pineapple fiber, and a Mr. R. The placepple has long been cultivated for its fiber in India, while it is manufactured into a cloth in the Philippines and woven into linen in China.
